INDEX.

A

AMINTOR, his letter, Page 4
Arpaſia, her character, 5
Antipathies in nature, not to be accounted for, 11
Authors deſerving to be encouraged, 38
Amelia, her reaſon for marrying Melania, 44
Arminius, a play, 75
Affectation of a lady concerning tea, 86
Ambition, its power on the Queen of Hungary, 157
Aurelia, her ſtory, 168
Annihilation, believed but by few, 216
A. B. his letter, 222
Apparitions, not always to be rejected, 245
Adraſta, her letter, 268

B

BOOKS, benefits we receive from them, 37
Bellamonte, her letter, 88
Beauclair, madame, her character, 223
Bellegarde, an excellent author, 273

C

COUNTRY juſtice, his blunt reply, 31
Celemena, her ſtory, 47
Caius Marius, not enough modernized, 77
Curioſo Politico, his angry letter, 98
Commerce, of late too much neglected, 122
Curio, his character and apoſtacy, 140
Compariſon between the Queens of Hungary and Spain, 154
Cautions againſt jealouſy, 179
Cleora, her letter, 190
Cyril, biſhop of Alexandria, his cruel zeal, 200
Country lady, her ſurprize, 269
Conundrums much in vogue, 287

D

DISTRARIO, his letter, 58
Dialogue between an Engliſh and Hanoverian lady, 113
Diſſimulation, not natural to the Engliſh, 131
Dreams not always to be contemned, 260
Drum, a term for an aſſembly, 270

E

EXCESS in any thing, a fault, 47
Edward and Eleonora, an excellent play, 74
Engliſh, fond of exotics, 84
Equality between the ſexes dreaded, 204
Examples of virtue, from whom moſt uſeful, 210
Euphroſine, her deſign to bring court puppets into Guildhall 292

F

FEMALE Spectator's advice to Amintor, 12
Ditto to Bellamonte, 97
Female Spectator ſeverely cenſured, 102

INDEX.

A

AMINTOR, his letter, Page 4
Arpaſia, her character, 5
Antipathies in nature, not to be accounted for, 11
Authors deſerving to be encouraged, 38
Amelia, her reaſon for marrying Melania, 44
Arminius, a play, 75
Affectation of a lady concerning tea, 86
Ambition, its power on the Queen of Hungary, 157
Aurelia, her ſtory, 168
Annihilation, believed but by few, 216
A. B. his letter, 222
Apparitions, not always to be rejected, 245
Adraſta, her letter, 268

B

BOOKS, benefits we receive from them, 37
Bellamonte, her letter, 88
Beauclair, madame, her character, 223
Bellegarde, an excellent author, 273

C

COUNTRY juſtice, his blunt reply, 31
Celemena, her ſtory, 47
Caius Marius, not enough modernized, 77
Curioſo Politico, his angry letter, 98
Commerce, of late too much neglected, 122
Curio, his character and apoſtacy, 140
Compariſon between the Queens of Hungary and Spain, 154
Cautions againſt jealouſy, 179
Cleora, her letter, 190
Cyril, biſhop of Alexandria, his cruel zeal, 200
Country lady, her ſurprize, 269
Conundrums much in vogue, 287

D

DISTRARIO, his letter, 58
Dialogue between an Engliſh and Hanoverian lady, 113
Diſſimulation, not natural to the Engliſh, 131
Dreams not always to be contemned, 260
Drum, a term for an aſſembly, 270

E

EXCESS in any thing, a fault, 47
Edward and Eleonora, an excellent play, 74
Engliſh, fond of exotics, 84
Equality between the ſexes dreaded, 204
Examples of virtue, from whom moſt uſeful, 210
Euphroſine, her deſign to bring court puppets into Guildhall 292

F

FEMALE Spectator's advice to Amintor, 12
Ditto to Bellamonte, 97
Female Spectator ſeverely cenſured, 102

Freedom, not to be ſupported without virtue, Page 108
Fame, her report, 137
Fancy, its great power, 162
Falſe pride, 198
Fortune-tellers, folly of crediting them, 256
French ladies, eaſily improve themſelves, 282
French gentlemen, their readineſs to oblige, 283
Follies more difficult to be ſhook off than vices, 306

G

GLORY too highly valued, 17
Gratitude, in ſome caſes, a vice, 28
Guſtavus Vaſa, a true patriot tragedy, 75
Gaming, its ill conſequences in both ſexes, 275

H

HYPATIA, her character, 200
Honour of itſelf not to be relied on, 234

I

INGRATITUDE, the difficulty of defining it, 2
Inſtances where gratitude is owing, 33
John Careful, his letter, 80
Jealouſy its ſources, 163
Immortality of the ſoul, belief of it neceſſary, 233
J. J. his letter, 287
Jeffery Rudel, his ſtory, 311

K

KING Charles II. his admiration of wit, 308

L

LAW of Candy, very particular, 18
Loſtland, his unhappy caſe, 41
Licence-office for plays, how far prejudicial, 60
Lucilius, his behaviour, on his wife's falſehood, 173
Latitudinarians, dangerous to ſociety, 235
Lady ſharpers, 271

M

MACROBIUS, his diſappointment, 31
Mira, her reprimand, 37
Muſicians, the vanity of one juſtly mortified, 56
Manilius, his ill conduct, 184
Martius and Iſmenia, their ſtory, 236
Mollman, conductor of a puppet-ſhow, 288

N

NOVELTY, the paſſion moſt people have for it, 286

O

OPINION of the Female Spectator concerning Amintor and Arpaſia, 11
Odd notions of ſome moderns, 218
Old gentleman's ſarcaſm on the ladies of theſe times, 309

P

PLAUSIBLE, Sir Thomas, his character, Page 40
Poets, how uſed by players, 60
Partiality, how blameable, 72
Philo-Sergnitas, his letter, 144
Platonides, his letter, 211
Preſcience, ſtarts of it experienced, 213
Philenia, her letter, 281
Part of an intended farce, 288

R

RUSSIAN women, the proof they expect of their huſbands affection, 164
Rabbin, the opinion of one on dreams, 261
Religion dwells not too much on forms, 264
Racket, Rout, terms uſed by lady gameſters, 269
Romping dangerous to women, 309

S

SELF-ſufficient people never to be obliged, 44
Stage ought to be the ſchool of virtue, 74
Shakeſpeare, in what faulty, 76
Sabina, her ſtory, 183
Study of philoſophy recommended, 196
Self-ſatisfaction, the univerſal aim, 235
Stratagems practiſed by lady gameſters, 271
Strephon and Celia, their ſtory, 298
Strange example of the force of love, 312

T

TWO ſiſters, their hard fate, 25
Town, how partial to authors, 72
Tea, its conſtant uſe prejudicial, 186
The queriſt, his letter, 153
Time, how little valued, 281
Tripoly, the counteſs of, her gratitude, 315

U

UNNATURAL contention, 20
Verres, his character, 140
Virtuoſoes, an experiment made by them, 217
Vice followed only becauſe faſhionable, 296

W

WILDMAN, receives an unmerited favour, 40
Wager, the pleaſant event of one, 248
Wit, how much encouraged in France, 284

Y

YEWTREE, the fright it occaſioned, 246

Z

ZEAL in the clergy, when moſt ſerviceable to religion, 265

THE END OF THE SECOND VOLUME.